

Abstract of the Disclosure

A high voltage device comprising a substrate of a first type, first and second wells respectively of the first type and a second type in the substrate, a gate formed on the substrate, first and second doped regions both of the second type, respectively formed in the first and second wells and both sides of the gate, and a third doped region of the first type in the first well and adjacent to the first doped region.